

378.410207
C279n
1836

Handwritten text, possibly a title or header, appearing as a series of connected loops and curves.

2 vols. 1 1 1

2000

2000

10

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or header.

2nd edition - 1st issue

Handwritten notes or markings on the left side of the page.

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or header.

2. 1 1

Handwritten marks or characters on the left side of the page.

LIBRARY OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN

BOOKSTACKS

Digitized by Google

2 vols. 1. Part

A NEW ART
TEACHING HOW TO BE PLUCKED,
BEING A TREATISE
AFTER THE
FASHION OF ARISTOTLE; WRIT FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS IN THE UNIVERSITIES.
TO WHICH IS ADDED,
A SYNOPSIS OF DRINKING.

Ridiculum acri
Fortius ac melius magnas plerumque secat res. HOR. SAT.

Πᾶσα τέχνη καὶ πᾶσα μέθοδος ἀγαθοῦ τινος ἐφλεσθαι δοκεῖ. ARIST. ETH. Lib. 1.

Thus have I described and opened those peccant humours which have given impediment to the proficiencie of learning, wherein if I have been too plain, it must be remembered "Fidelia vulnera amantis, sed dolosa oscula malignantis."

BACON'S ADVANCEMENT OF LEARNING.

BY
SCRIBLERUS REDIVIVUS.

FIFTH EDITION.

OXFORD:
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY J. VINCENT;
MDCCCXXXVI.

378.410207
C279n
1836

CONTENTS.

The Preface which teacheth three things.

BOOK I.

Chap.	1. A Division of this Treatise	1
	2. A still further Division	2
	3. Concerning Construing	ib.
	4. Concerning Parsing	4
	5. Concerning Logic	5
	6. Concerning Euclid	6
	7. Concerning History	7
	8. Concerning Divinity	8
	9. Concerning Sciences	10
	10. Concerning the Composition of Latin and Greek	ib.
	11. Concerning Poesy	11

BOOK II.

Chap.	1. Concerning Idleness	12
	2. The Idleness of Smoking	ib.
	3. The Idleness of Love	15
	4. The Idleness of Novels	17
	5. The Idleness of Riding and Driving	19
	6. The Idleness of Billiards	21
	7. The Idleness of Rowing	ib.
	8. The Idleness of Music	22
	9. The Idleness of Wine Drinking	ib.
	10. Other Idlenesses	23
	11. The things to be avoided so as to get Plucked	24

Handwritten note:

BOOK III.

Chap. 1.	How to demean oneself at Examination	. 25
2.	Concerning the Examiner	ib.
3.	Concerning the Person Examined	26
4.	Concerning the Subject	27
5.	The Doctrine of Questions	ib.
6.	The Doctrine of Answers	28
7.	Distinctions of Little-go and Great-go	. 30
8.	Examples of approved Plucks	31
9.	Topics concerning Pluck	34
10.	A Classification of Plucks according to the matter	39
11.	Conclusion	40

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE THIRD EDITION.

Whereas in my former Prefaces I addressed the students of Oxford, so here I desire further the students of Cambridge to understand, that this book may be turned to their own account also, if they will be pleased to consider not so much the form of it as the matter. Thus as in other studies there hath ever been a generous rivalry between Cambridge and Oxford, so let it be hoped that in pursuit of Plucks also, these two Universities shall each by aid of this book, mutually strive to supersede the other, that there be no disparity left betwixt them.

PREFACE.

THIS Preface divideth itself into three parts ; whereof first, the usefulness of the art ;* second, the history of it ; third, the derivation of the word. To begin then with each in its own order. First, for the usefulness of the art, which indeed wanteth no proof for persons unprejudiced, but whereas the generality is not of this sort, I think best to say thus much upon it. For it is a thing not to be denied, that every art is good in proportion as it assisteth in producing some end, whereat mankind do aim in common. Now of this kind is the Art of Pluck ; for upon looking about this University, who doth not see that to be plucked is an end pursued by many persons, yea and these persons, such as from their age cannot be said not to have judgments. To these then and the like, this art teacheth an easy way to this their end, by a collection of subtle rules long practised at random, but till now never brought down to the axioms of true philosophy. Whereat let people wonder if they please, yet was the same the case with all arts at the beginning, as hath been acutely said of Logic by a learned man yet albeit not wise. Let so much have been said about the usefulness of this art, which indeed deserveth rather the name of a science, inasmuch as it not only serveth for an instrument, but likewise discusseth, as will be seen, the principles of Pluck. Nevertheless as it is still in its infant condition, content we with the term art, and so to proceed with what cometh next in order.

Now it may seem strange to the learned, that whereas I have said the Art of Pluck is new, I come next to a history of it.†

* Vide Aristot. Rhet. lib. i. cap. 1.

† Vide Whately's Introduction to the Art of Logic.

For history is of things past, and therefore old for the most part. Yet though the art be new, true it is, the thing itself hath existed a long while, yea, even from the days of Cheops, who was the first to found a college. Niebuhr * indeed hath it, that the custom of Pluck was brought to this college twenty-five years after the death of Cheops, in the Egyptian month Pilko by an Ethiopian priest surnamed Hushmug; against which disputeth Müller in four volumes, that the name was not Hushmug but Hugmush. Yet after all this disputation, still do I keep to my old opinion, for if Cheops builded a college, needs must he have founded Plucks at the same time; since in our own days no college existeth a year without a Pluck; whence it followeth that a college without Plucks is no real college. Yet was the college of Cheops a real college, and therefore needs must it have had Plucks. But to proceed with the history. It seemeth, that after the days of Cheops, Plucks spread abroad exceedingly, till they reached even to the Pelasgi, by which people were they carried into Greece. For that the descent of the Pelasgi was about this time, Herodotus doth amply testify, nor is it to be doubted that they brought wisdom into Greece and therefore Plucks. Yet at this time were Plucks of but a simple kind, without distinction of Little-go and Great-go, which waited for the wisdom of later ages. But as science grew and books were writ, so did Plucks increase in the gradual progression of things. For it is a truth not yet noted by philosophy, that as the circle of knowledge extendeth, so also extendeth the circle of not knowing, whereby was Euclid of great use to Plucks even in that age. Thus may it be said that Plucks went on hand in hand with wisdom in all Greece but most in Athens, where was most wisdom, till at the last after the conquest of Corinth, they were carried to Rome there to flourish till the dark ages. Yet was Athens not deprived of Plucks by this conquest, for being the University of the world, thither did flock all such as loved wisdom; yea of Cicero himself it is said, that he was plucked twice by reason that he could not pass the asses bridge. As for the dark ages, Plucks had been lost to the world in those times, but for the monasteries, wherein were they preserved, together with other wise institutions, till these modern times, in the which by slow degrees our Universities have brought them to perfection. For now beside the new distinction of Little-go and Great-go, a man may be plucked for different kinds of ignorance, each of which possesseth its own discriminations, to be detailed hereafter.

* Vide the Frankfort edition, which was published in 1829.

For the derivation of the word Pluck, to which I now proceed, it hath ever been a matter of great dubiousness. One person of no small wisdom saith, that a man is said to be plucked by contraries, that is to say, because at such a time he loseth all Pluck. The which argument I would allow to be true, but that the premiss is false. For many there be, who by being plucked, grow yet more plucky, as was the case with Sir Giles C * * * * * of * * * * *, which gentleman, after being plucked, gave a party the same evening, declaring that he minded it not at all, yea rather gloried therein. So falleth this first argument to the ground, to which followeth this other. For indeed it was an ancient custom in Oxford, whereof there be still remains, that when a man was turned in his examination, a person should pluck the Proctor's gown, whereby as he proceeded to give him a degree he was stopped in the midst. Hence, as the antiquarians do say, it came to pass that the man so losing his degree, was said to be plucked. Yet in this argument also is there no small flaw, which the love of truth compelleth me to make plain, after the example of Aristotle, albeit against my inclination. For verily it is the man who is said to be plucked nowadays, not the Proctor, the which thing differeth not a little. Many other arguments there be on this matter, but I proceed to my own opinion, as being what seemeth to me the best. For first, what meaneth Pluck? Doth it not signify to lose one's feathers? the which it suffered metaphorically by every man turned in his examination. To me then it seemeth that a man is said to be plucked from analogy to a bird ; but what that bird be, whether big or little, land or water bird, I pretend not to say. The like analogy as a further proof is to be noted betwixt a man and a bird, not only at his Pluck, but also before and after ; for he is said to be crammed first, and to have been well roasted by the examiner afterward.

And now to conclude this Preface with one thing more in praise of this Art of Pluck ; let it be known that it shareth with Analytics and Rhetoric alone of all arts, in being an art of contraries. For as it teacheth a person how best to be plucked, so also by the addition of not to each rule, it teacheth a person how not to be plucked, if there be any such. But on this and the rest enough hath been said for Preface, so proceed we to the art with all attention.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

Learned reader, Aristotle saith that "time is a fellow-worker with philosophers in producing the perfection of science," the which thing is to be observed not a little in mine own case. For it being six days since this Art was first published to the world, in that time have many new lights appeared to me concerning it. For being at present concealed, I do hear myself praised and blamed daily before my face. Nay mine own friends at such times as they have nothing else to talk about, tell me their opinion of this new Art, giving likewise the name of the author, with no small assurance. In this second Preface, I would have thee understand that I put into thy hands the same Art indeed as before, but with certain additions, especially from the examinations just finished. These additions, if thou art really and truly studious in ignorance and idleness, thou wilt find out of thyself in the reading of this book ; of which let me say to its praise, that there hath been no other book published in Oxford in the reading whereof thou mightest more easily go to sleep, and so be idle, and get plucked accordingly. Which last, wishing thee as many times over as thou desirest, I remain thy friend and fellow gownsman,

SCRIBLERUS REDIVIVUS.

Nov. 13, 1635.

BOOK I.

CHAP. I.

A Division of the Treatise.

Let the Art* of Pluck be that art which teacheth how most thoroughly to be plucked, the easiest way in the shortest time, under a case the most difficult.† For truly, it is an easy task to be plucked, for one ignorant altogether of things, but the fine thing is, for one who cometh from school well laden with knowledge, so to demean himself as to come to be plucked in the end, and that in a short time, not for one ignorance only, as of Euclid, but for many, the which thing teacheth this art.

Now of "Plucks" there be in this age two kinds, firstly the Pluck in Little-go, secondly the Pluck in Great-go. But as Aristotle in his Poetics hath thought fit to discuss chiefly Tragedy, by reason that it embraceth within itself all questions pertaining to the other sorts of poesy, so let us also in this art of Pluck discuss the Great-go Pluck for the most part, bringing in at the end such distinctions between the two as shall seem fit. For indeed doth not Great-go, besides what it hath of its own, include all the appurtenances of Little-go, such are Euclid, Logic, Horace, Virgil, and all else?

* Vide Rhet. lib. i. cap. 2.

† Let it not be understood from this, that this art concerneth theory only, and not practice, for as Aristotle saith in his Poetics, τὸ τέλος πράξις τίς ἐστιν; and again in his Ethics, lib. ii. cap. 2. οὐ γὰρ ἔσ' εἰδόμενον τί ἐστιν ἡ ἀρετὴ, σκοπεύμεθα· ἀλλ' ἔσ' ἀγαθὸν γενόμεθα. Subject of the Essay, Mich. Term.

This thing then being settled, it remaineth to discuss the Great-go Pluck, which discussion divideth itself into two parts as followeth. For a man is plucked firstly, by the preparation of ignorance he maketh thereto before his Examination; secondly, by the way he carrieth himself at his Examination. Now these two things are different and beside them there is nothing else. Let then be discussed in the first place the preparation of ignorance before Examination.

CHAP. II.

A still further Division.

But this preparation likewise divideth itself into two kinds, whereof one is a preparation direct, the other a preparation indirect. The first meaneth such methods of Construing, of Parsing, of Logic, of Euclid, of Divinity, and the rest, as be most fit to gain a full Pluck; the second meaneth all kinds of Idleness, whereby the mind is put into the best channel of ignorance for the same.

CHAP. III.

Concerning Construing.

To begin then with the preparation 'direct, whereof first, cometh Construing. Now construing is divided into two kinds, first to construe Latin, second to construe Greek, of which each taketh three subdivisions; first to construe well, second to construe right, third to construe wrong. But of these three the last alone serveth to Pluck, being verily an easy thing to do simply, as for example sake, to construe amo, "thou lovest." Yet in a complexity of words where there be many ways of construing wrong, yea truly a difficult thing it is to construe the wrongest way, the which thing he who doth best hath most likelihood of gaining a full Pluck. Whereof let the following be examples for imitation.

As first, since vices meaneth shiftings and changings, to construe mutat terra vices, "the earth changeth her shift." So from the same author, horridus aper, "a horrid bore." And whereas Livy hath the following sentence, Hannibal Alpes transivit summa diligentia, which meaneth, "Hannibal passed over the Alps as fast as he could," so let him who desireth a Pluck, departing from this method construe it thus, "Hannibal passed over the Alps on the top of a diligence." So much for Latin. Then for Greek as followeth, πολλή αἰδῶς δωματοφθορεῖν, Æsch. Aga. 921. "It is a great shame to squander ones goods." ὦμοι πέπληγμαi. id. 1314. "Oh dear! I'm blowed." ἔρχεται γυνή ἐκ τῆς Σαμαρειάς. John cap. 4. "I perceive that thou art a prophet." δηναιαὶ κόραι Prom. 819. "Old maids." So also from Aristotle's Poetics, δεδίδαχε δὲ μάλιστα Ὅμηρος ψεύδη λέγειν ὡς δεῖ. "Now Homer hath taught better than all others how to tell lies in the right style." From which examples is seen how first, simple words which cannot be construed wrong, so far as grammar concerneth, may yet be turned to a wrong meaning by fit attention; how secondly, a complex sentence so turned to a wrong meaning, may yet be further improved in wrongness by bad grammar. As happened with Mr. Thomas T of , who when he had construed Hannibal Alpes transivit summa diligentia, "Hannibal passed over the Alps on the top of a diligence," was straightway reprov'd by the examiner as having construed wrong, whereon he yet improved the wrongness by bad grammar, construing thus; "the Alps passed over Hannibal on the top of a diligence:" and again, "a diligence passed over Hannibal on the top of the Alps." So much for good construing, which requireth further that in place of originals thou read translations, especially such as be of a free kind.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning Parsing.

As for Parsing, which cometh next in order, it requireth but little to say upon it. Only let each remember, where he can, for masculine to say feminine; for singular plural; for nominative ac.

cusative; and so on through all the divers ramifications of nouns adjective and substantive. For verbs, let him not omit to put active for passive, present for past, and future for present, whereby he will gain a Pluck in good style. Yet to this end doth Greek offer more facility than Latin,* for that it hath a middle voice, which the Latin hath not, or but a little. Likewise it hath paulo post futurums, whereby boys at school do get floggings many, inasmuch that at one time it was meditated by the learned to dismiss paulo post futurums altogether; yet still do they exist, for the sake of making an easy way to Plucks. Now to proceed.

CHAP. V.

Concerning Logic.

Logic is defined to be that instrumental art which helpeth a man to be plucked in his Little-go and Great-go by aid of his reason. For verily as the right use of Logic doth give an acuteness and readiness to the intellect, so doth the wrong use thereof mystify the mind and lead to Pluck.

Among good examples of logic take the following. For definition, as of Oxford nominally, "a place where oxen do ford through;" accidentally, "a learned society;" essentially, "a place where are many Plucks." For division, as of "a plum-cake into raisins and suet;" of "a kingdom into Tories and Whigs." For proposition, as when it was "proposed to admit Dissenters," which proposition, as was indeed affirmative at the first, but became negative afterward. For the mood of a proposition, as when that proposition being so negatived did put the Dissenters in an "ill mood." For conversion, "some wives love their husbands," converted to, "all husbands love their wives"—"Nothing is better than a good conscience," converted to, "a good conscience is better than nothing." "I saw two cats fighting on the leads," converted to, "I saw two dogs fighting in the street." Of conversion do all words admit, saving the word Jew, according to some. Then for opposition, Cain hated his brother Abel; therefore it is argued, he also "opposed him." As for syllogism which in cases of Pluck is called "sillygism," it hath divers kinds whereof let suffice one instance, as

* Vide Edward's Eton Latin Grammar, p. 13.]

All reading men are animals
 Some animals (that is to say pigs) are learned
 Therefore it is not to be denied that some reading men may be learned.

CHAP. VI.

Concerning Euclid.

Of Euclid is but little to be said, save that for Pluck it is best to be learned by rote and not by understanding. Also to the same end, it is a good thing to take for granted such problems as be difficult to learn. Wherefore let thy Euclid be bought second-hand, for so shall two advantages accrue to thee, inasmuch as firstly, thou shalt know by the thumbing which be the hard problems and so avoid them; secondly, of that same thumbing shalt thou have the glory when thou shewest the book to thy governor.

CHAP. VII.

Concerning History.

Of History useful to Pluck are there four divisions, for the most part, that is to say, Herodotus, Thucydides, Livy, and Tacitus, whereof Herodotus produceth Pluck in proportion 40, Thucydides 39, Livy 53, and Tacitus 44; whence it appeareth that Thucydides produceth fewest Plucks, and Livy most. Now the reason of this is, that Thucydides being difficult is most studied, but Livy being easy, is studied but a little, being read for the most part, that is to say, the second decade, in an analysis. In the reading of History for Pluck, let each be mindful to consider of chronology, as of a separate thing not to be mixed up with history, for indeed history is of things, but chronology of times. Therefore let him be careful either first, not to read chronology at all; or secondly, to read it in such a way as for it to have no congruity with history. For example, let him put Pericles after Cicero, and Virgil before Thucydides, this being the true way, which in geography also is to be observed. For as Sparta is commonly said to be in the Peloponnesus, and Ephesus in Asia Minor, so let him who aimeth at a good Pluck put Sparta boldly into the Baltic, and Ephesus among the "Silly" islands; also, let each consider this general rule, that in proportion as a book is more difficult, so if it be the less studied it will produce more Plucks. Likewise this other, that if a person remember not one particular event of history, the first that he calleth to mind will do in its stead. The same for names also, as to put for Alcibiades, Heliogabalus; for Julius Cæsar, Og the King of Basan.

CHAP. VIII.

Concerning Divinity.

Next cometh a discussion of the kind of Divinity needful for Pluck, whereto let the rules following suffice.

First, Let a man make himself master of many and divers answers in Divinity from Watts' Scripture History;* which let be done in the morning before examination, so when his examination com-

* Of this kind also was the divinity of George H * * *, who passed indeed his Little-go with ease, but being asked who Moses was and what happened unto him, said he remembered not, save that "he was nearly drowned when he was a baby."

eth, let him put in one of the answers that first riseth to his memory, not minding the question at all as happened with Mr. Hugh H*, who being asked "if he remembered what animal is recorded in the Bible to have spoken?" answered confidently, "the whale;" whereupon the examiner further interrogated him, "unto whom the whale spake?" on this did Mr. H* think awhile, considering what answers he had still left, which being done, he replied that "the whale spake to Moses in the bullrushes." Now this answer might have satisfied another examiner; yet was this examiner not content, but yet further asked, "what the whale said," to which was answer made boldly, "almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." This is an example of an answer in divinity good for plucking.

Secondly, It is best not to read the Bible, yet if a man do, let him read forty chapters a day at the least.

Thirdly, Let a man be careful not to listen to what is read each day in chapel, for thereby he will escape much knowledge of divinity: for which reason let him read a novel instead of a Prayer Book, Fourthly and lastly, Let a man consider of divinity that it is an easy thing and to be got up in half a day; so will he come to be plucked more surely, for he will ever put it off to the last, as in human life is the custom also.

CHAP. IX.

Concerning Sciences.

Sciences are useful to Pluck but seldom, for indeed few persons do take up sciences for a Pluck, save as did Mr. Andrew D, who being conscious of knowing nothing, nevertheless went up for a first class, hoping cunningly so to pass. However he succeeded not, but was plucked yet the more. Therefore of sciences I have but little to say,* save that it is best for Pluck to read no more than an analysis of them in English the night before; for which purpose, it seems, were such books writ at the first.

CHAP. X.

Concerning the composition of Latin and Greek.

For writing Latin and Greek, consider well the rules for construing and parsing, writ above† which will suffice for the most part. Yet must it not be omitted, that useful also, are letters wriggled and tortuous, whereby the examiner is puzzled in

* It requireth a full and perfect ignorance of philosophy both ancient and modern, to understand the sciences in a way useful towards Pluck. Nevertheless many persons in Oxford do attain to this every year, for which they are highly to be praised.

† Likewise Crombie's Gymnasium, that is to say, so it be read superficially.

the reading, wherefore, further do I recommend a bad pen, that spurteth the ink.*

CHAP. XI.

Concerning Poesy.

As for Poesy, it compriseth many books useful to Pluck, whereof are most in use, Virgil, Horace, Juvenal, and Euripides. Now these poets, when they wrote, knew not the high use to which their books would be put. Yet nevertheless have they by intuition writ many things easy to be mistaken, and therefore useful to Pluck. Nay indeed, where they have writ in a clear manner, still it is possible to construe them wrong, as hath been before shewn. Therefore let every one in learning them, take care out of many bad meanings to choose the worst. Here also to conclude do I give this further rule for poesy and prose, which deserveth no small attention, that is to say, to construe prose as if it were poesy, and poesy as if it were prose.

* Among examples of Latin composition good for plucking take these following, a man of a good constitution, "homo bonæ reipublicæ;" they came down at a quick rate, "celeri rate descenderunt;" a woman of good carriage, "mulier boni vehiculi;" Theodosius was the younger son of a decayed family, "Theodosius erat junior filius corrosæ familiæ;" it is well to punish tyrants, "bene est ad puniendum tyrannorum." Also in spelling, as to spell Horatius, Horatious, and the like.

These examples are enough for diligent learners; as for examples in Greek, they are not needful, for he that writeth bad Latin can also write bad Greek if it be necessary; albeit he that writeth good Latin, cannot for that reason write good Greek also.

BOOK II.

CHAP. I.

Concerning Idleness.

Thus much for the preparation direct for plucking, to which followeth next in order, the preparation indirect, that is to say, Idleness. Whereof do both require much care and attention, but most of all the latter. For indeed it is a hard thing to be idle for a continuance; the which thing teacheth Virgil, when he saith studiis otii,* the which also is to be seen in the idle persons themselves, who for the most part do seem weary and way-begone; shewing how hard a thing it is, and what trouble it taketh to be well plucked.

CHAP. II.

The Idleness of Smoking.

Of Idlenesses there be many, among which first cometh the idleness of smoking.† Smoking is defined to be the sucking in of smoke at one part of the mouth, and the ejection thereof at another part. Yet is there a difference (as

* Likewise philosophers do teach the same when they discuss the vis inertiae.

† Vide Arist. Eth. 31. lib. 3.

Aristotle saith of justice) between a smoker and him who smoketh, for the first hath the habit of smoking which the last hath not yet. Of smoking there be two grand kinds; first, with a cigar; second, with a pipe. Whereof the smoking with a cigar is divided into two kinds, first, with a cigar of paper as at school;* second, with a cigar of tobacco as at college; whence cometh a still further subdivision of the first into white paper or brown paper according to quality; thin or thick according to substance; long or short according to quantity. In like manner also is subdivided the cigar of tobacco according to its different kinds. As for the other grand division; the smoking with a pipe divideth itself into two kinds; first, with a common clay; second, with a German pipe. Whereof the first is subdivided into the straight pipe; the twisted pipe of modern fashion; the pipe with a plain bowl; the pipe with a flowery bowl; the pipe with red sealing wax at the end, the pipe with black sealing wax; the pipe with no sealing wax; the pipe with resin; the pipe full length; the pipe broken short, (as in the pipe of a coal heaver,) and so on. For the German pipe it admitteth of no division save division of

* Likewise on the continent do they smoke cigars of paper with this difference, that there they put tobacco inside, but at school the cigar is of paper wholly, whence it is seen how wrong was Mr. H, who said of this book that it was written by a man who knew not the noble science of smoking, for that he spoke of "paper cigars." age, seeing that the best German pipe is that which hath been longest smoked ; for which reason it is in use with a certain tobacconist of High-street to employ, on direction, two boys for smoking new pipes into old. Thus much for the instrument wherewith smoking is done. As for the manner of smoking, it is of divers kinds. Some do smoke sitting, some walking, and some standing. For sitting ; a man may smoke first, in his own rooms ; second, in another man's rooms ; each of which admitteth the subdivision following. For it is possible to smoke at the fire, which may be done, first, with legs over the grate ; second, with legs on the grate ; third, with legs under the grate. And it is possible to smoke at table, which may be done, first, at breakfast ; second, at luncheon ; third, at tea ; fourth, at supper ; which last is most practised. Now all these instruments and manners of smoking are useful to Pluck ; but as to which produceth most idleness, and therefore most Pluck, it is hard to say : for every one differeth in his adaptation to things external. Yet in the abstract is standing more idle than walking, and therefore to be preferred ; as likewise is sitting more idle than standing. Also in the abstract, to smoke with a German pipe hath in it more of laziness than to smoke with a cigar ; for why ? He who smoketh with a cigar hath need to reach his hand for another when the first is smoked ; but he that useth a German pipe may sit a long while, for that it lasteth longer. Therefore it is found in the records of Oxford, that in the year 1833, of those that used German pipes were plucked 72, but of those that used cigars only 53. Whence for the most part do I recommend German pipes, as being the better way of prosecuting idleness with vigour.

CHAP. III.

The Idleness of Love.

Next cometh the idleness of Love which leadeth to no few Plucks. For he that is in love*, albeit his dictionary lie open before him, thinketh not of study. He walketh backward and forward in his rooms; he turneth his back to the fire lifting up his coat-tail; he looketh out of the window wishing to be a bird; he openeth the most secret part of his desk for a lock of hair and so passeth his time, thinking thereon till his Little-go or Great-go cometh unawares. Of love are there divers kinds according to the person loved, wherefore it followeth to consider, what sort of lady produceth the love most likely to cause Pluck.

Now ladies may be considered in three ways first, as to substance; second as to quality; third, as to relation.

Under category of substance cometh the rich

* Vide Rhet. lib. i. cap. 5.

lady, the fat lady, the tall lady, the heavy lady, the plump lady, together with the contraries thereto, as the poor lady, the thin lady, the short lady, the light lady, the skinny lady.*

For quality; it is of two kinds, first, of person; second, of mind. Under the first cometh the round-faced lady, the long-faced lady, the wide-faced lady, the Roman-nosed lady, the red-haired lady, the gooseberry-eyed lady with their opposites. Under the second cometh the amiable lady, the romantic lady, the quick lady, the sensible lady, the flirting lady, all these with their opposites.

Lastly; under category of relation cometh first, the lady without relations, the widow, the ward in Chancery, the lady without brothers, the lady with first cousins, the lady with first cousins once removed, and so on. Secondly, relation to age; as the young lady, the middle-aged lady, the old maid, the lady with teeth, the lady without teeth, the lady that useth paint, the little girl, the big girl, the old lady, and so on.

Wherefore in considering the lady most likely to produce Pluck; there being three things concerned, first, substance; second, quality; third, relation; it followeth that the lady to be chosen, is she who hath the best in each. As in substance, the rich lady is best ; in quality of person, the Roman-nosed lady ; in quality of mind, the romantic lady ; in relation, the lady without brothers, and the young lady. Yet is it after all a matter uncertain which lady produceth most love, and therefore most idleness in each particular person. For sometimes a young man falleth in love with an old lady having money, as happened with Mr. Andrew D*, who was plucked at Little-go in 1827 ; and sometimes a handsome man falleth in love with a gooseberry-eyed, fat, poor, red-haired lady, if she be amiable, of which last however hath been but one example in Oxford. Therefore as I said, is the matter of love an uncertain thing, yet from what hath been here writ concerning it, may one nevertheless learn something of it at the least, as regardeth Pluck in the abstract, and now to proceed to other idlenesses.

* Thus Aristotle hath, Rhet. lib. i. cap. 5. θηλειῶν ἀρετὴ σώματος μέγεθος, κ. τ. λ. see also, for what followeth, his doctrine concerning noses.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Idleness of Novels.

Next to the idleness of love cometh the idleness of reading novels, inasmuch as they concern love for the most part. Now novels are to be considered first, as to places where they are to be got ; second, as to the most fitting time for reading them ; third, in respect of their kinds. For place, there be four places in Oxford where novels are to be got ; Mr Weatherstone's, Mr. Dewe's, Mr.

Hawkins', and Mr. Richards': whereof the first, which is the oldest is in St. Aldate's; the second, which hath many new books and various, is in Broad-street; the third, in High-street; and the fourth, in Magdalen-street. For time; the best time to read a novel is just before thy examination, for thereby the mind is diverted from study and so produceth Pluck; also let thy reading be at night for the most part, for in day time thou hast other idlenesses busying thee. As for the kind of novels they be divers; as first, in respect of age; the novel well thumbed, the novel that is sticky, the old novel new bound, the novel whence the preface is torn, the novel whence the conclusion is torn; second, in respect of subject, as the novel that hath many love scenes, which is called by Mr. Bulwer in speaking of his own novels, the novel philosophical; the novel maritime which treateth of sailors' oaths; the novel fashionable which bringeth high life down stairs, and discusseth ladies' maids; the novel of real life which treateth of elopements; the novel religious wherein pretty Protestants do convert Roman Catholics; third, in respect of manner, as the novel which sendeth asleep, the novel which letteth go to sleep, the novel which keepeth awake. Now all these sorts are useful to Pluck; wherefore let them be read abundantly and without ceasing, so that the boy who carrieth the novels be even tired thereby; nor let it be forgot to scribble notes on the leaves with thy philosophical opinion of things, as of the author that he is "a great ass;" of the book that it is "written confoundedly bad and very absurd throughout;" and of certain expressions that "there is no such word," for so shall succeeding readers gain wisdom by thy notices.

CHAP. V.

The Idleness of Riding and Driving.

Of riding there be two grand kinds, first, to ride on an animal; second, to ride on a vehicle; whereof the first is called specifically to ride, the second to drive.

The first differeth firstly according to the divers kinds of animals, for some do ride horses, some ponies, and some donkeys, whereof the two first only do subsist in Oxford. For horses; a man may ride a white horse, a black horse, and a bay horse, as also a mixture of these, as a grey horse, a horse skewbald, a horse piebald; each of which admitteth this further subdivision; a horse with a long tail, a horse with a short tail, a horse with one eye, a horse broken-kneed, a horse that plungeth, a horse that kicketh, a horse with white hoofs, a horse broken winded; of which last are many in Oxford. The same also of ponies. Then for the manner of riding, there is this further difference; for it is possible to walk, to amble, to trot, to canter, to gallop, to race, and to leap; which last may be done first, with the rider on the horse; second, with the rider over the horse: third, with the rider under the horse, as in Oxford. To these let be added hunting which differeth in three ways; for it is possible to hunt a living animal, as a fox, a hare, a donkey; and it is possible to hunt a piece of flesh that is dragged on in front by a little boy; and it is possible to hunt a steeple, which is called a steeple-chase; each of which may be done, first, having a red coat or not having a red coat; second, having a dinner party afterward or not having a dinner party afterward. For driving; it differeth according to vehicles, for some do drive phaetons, some coaches, some gigs, and some tandems, which last differeth from the former in being forbidden by the Proctors. Furthermore some do drive their own vehicles, some the vehicles of their friends, and some vehicles which are let. Of these the first do avoid rough places, the second and third care not; also the third, which is he that driveth let vehicles, is of two kinds; first, he that payeth; second, he that payeth not; whereof the former admitteth a still further division into two; first, he that payeth much at the time; second, he that payeth more afterward.

Let so much have been said concerning the genus, species, and difference of riding. As for the property, it is of two kinds; for some do ride that have property and can afford, some likewise do ride that cannot afford. For the accidents, they differ as follows: for some do break their wheels, some their noses, and some their fortunes; whereof the first is separable, but the second and third inseparable; for the wheel cometh off being broken, and so is replaced by a new wheel; but this happeneth not to the nose, nor to the fortune, whence many do leave Oxford with broken noses, but more with broken fortunes.

CHAP. VI.

The Idleness of Billiards.

The Idleness of Billiards, is an idleness good for Pluck and not to be dis-esteemed, albeit many that pass do also play at billiards. Of billiard rooms useful to Pluck there be eleven, whereof one by Mr. Tyrrell's hath of late been decorated with a new painted board at the outside. There is also another in New College-lane much to be recommended, which was among the first to have metallic tables whereby were Plucks increased not a little that year.

CHAP. VII.

The Idleness of Rowing.

Rowing by which is understood the pushing of a boat with oars, hath not idleness in its own nature simply, for indeed sometimes he that abstaineth from rowing is idle, for the reason that he abstaineth, as with a London boatman. Yet when it be practised in the extreme, where it is not necessary, it is an idleness nevertheless; as to row every evening in an eight oar, when one hath skiffed beyond Iffley of a morning. King and Davis have good boats, also Franklin, and Mrs. Hall of ancient memory. The last mentioned hath a new sailing boat surnamed Pilot, which by reason of its goodness hath already brought in five Plucks, whereof were three in Great-go

CHAP. VIII.

The Idleness of Music.

Albeit to have a good ear bringeth not a Pluck of necessity, yet the playing of many instruments leadeth to Pluck not a little, and therefore is a thing to be practised. Of instruments, the flute bringeth fewest Plucks, and the piano-forte most, for the first cannot be played for many hours in a day, but the last admitteth of this.

CHAP. IX.

The Idleness of Wine Drinking

Wine drinking produceth Pluck each year in the proportion following: Sherry 72, Claret 23, Madeira 27, Champagne 13, Port 90. The reason whereof is, that Port is most drunk, Champagne least, and the rest in proportion. Of late also hath Beer contributed not a little to produce Plucks, for indeed Beer is a good thing for making the mind heavy and loaded. Nevertheless as yet Beer hath not such consequence in Oxford as in Cambridge, being a new fashion in this place.

CHAP. X.

Concerning other Idlenesses.

There be many other Idlenesses of the like sort with those mentioned, such are the kicking up of rows, the sleeping all day long in an easy chair, as does Mr. S*, the writing of poesy, the going to plays at Abingdon, the shying at lamps, the playing at whist with the oak sported, the shooting with a bow and arrow, and such like; all which, so they be taken in discretion, that is to say, as not to interrupt one another, do lead to Pluck. But it mattereth not to say more of them for the present, seeing that the principle of them may be drawn from what hath been aforesaid concerning the rest. Moreover in Oxford they do grow up naturally, and therefore are best to be learned by practice, and the close following of the many good examples thereto. Yet is there one other idleness that deserveth mention particular in this place, for that it is not known as an idleness, albeit it is one; that is to say, the idleness of thinking upon one's debts, wherein is much time consumed. Therefore mind that thy debts be many, for so shalt thou come to be better plucked; moreover thou doest good to thy fellow creatures thereby, for what thing is more divine than confidence betwixt man and man? the which thou promotest exceedingly by living upon trust.

CHAP XI.

The things to be avoided so as to get Plucked.

Among things to be avoided for Pluck are these, for in this also consisteth an idleness, yet not particular but general. As for example, if thou really studiest to get Plucked, thou must consider that economy of time, together with good counsel and discreet doings, are vain things not to be practised. Thou must shun a sober friend. Thou must despise honourable ambition, having opinion of thy superiors as persons of no respect. Beware also of having a Dictionary or Lexicon in thy room; and take heed that thou attend not lecture whether public or private. But instead of that, give thyself up to whatever thy fancy pleaseth best disregarding all else. So much for things to be avoided, which concludeth this part of the treatise.

BOOK III.

CHAP. I.

How to demean oneself at Examination.

As to the demeaning of oneself at Examination, which was the second grand division, it consisteth of five things. For in examination are three things to be considered; first, the person who examineth; second, the person examined; third, the subject whereon the examination fixeth; whereof to the examiner belongeth question; to the person examined answer. First then to consider him who examineth.

CHAP. II.

Concerning the Examiner.

Let an Examiner be defined to be one who plucketh, whence cometh it that examiners are of three kinds; first, the morose examiner who plucketh ill-naturedly; second, the good humoured examiner who plucketh with a smile on his face; third, the good natured examiner who plucketh with pity. Whereof there is this difference; that the first endeavoureth to pluck; the second careth not; the third avoideth. Whence cometh further, a distinction of manner; for the first questioneth oft and loud on a thing which he knoweth to be difficult, making an austere face and frightening;

the second, speaketh blandly and joketh not a little, playing his wit as occasion serveth; but the third, which is the best, desireth thee first to sit down; then speaking with sweetness indescribable, giveth such questions as may draw out not thy ignorance, but thy knowledge. So the first treateth thee as a naughty schoolboy; the second, as a gentleman; but the third, as a friend.

CHAP. III.

Concerning the person Examined.

As for the Persons Examined, they be each of them different according to their different idlenesses. For all are idle, inasmuch as they who sport now, do sport for present idleness; and they who read now, do read for the most part, that they may be idle afterward with better grace. Thus the one set are idle in practice, and the other in expectation. Now the different idlenesses are seen from what hath been before writ concerning them, therefore needless it is to mention them afresh. Yet let it not be omitted, that oftentimes the person examined changeth according to the examiner; for first, if the examiner be morose, the person examined becomes nervous and afraid, so that oftentimes he forgetteth himself and cometh to be plucked; yea, even though he may have taken much pains contrarywise. Second, if the examiner be good humoured yet not good natured, and so playeth his wit with laughing and jesting, then doth the person examined grow flippant and saucy, fancying he shall pass to be sure with such a good sort of man. Third, if the examiner be a person kind, yet having respect for himself (as in truth be the Oxford examiners for the most), then the person examined setteth into his natural self and so is it easily discerned whether he have wisdom or not.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning the Subject.

As for the Subject, it consisteth of Logic, Euclid, and such other authors as have been mentioned in the first book; besides which, is nothing else to be observed.

CHAP. V.

The Doctrine of Questions.

For Questions, they differ in many ways and are to be considered; first, in respect of substance; that is to say, whether they be easy or difficult; second, in respect of quality; that is to say, whether they be put in a loud or soft voice; third, in respect of quantity; that is to say, whether they may be many or few.

Now as to substance; the morose examiner putteth an easy question in a difficult way; the good humoured examiner putteth each in its own way; the good natured examiner putteth a difficult question in an easy way.

As to quality; the morose examiner useth a loud surly voice; the good humoured examiner useth a quick voice; the good natured examiner useth a soft voice.

As to quantity; the morose examiner putteth many questions and difficult; the good humoured examiner putteth few questions and difficult; the good natured examiner putteth few questions and easy. So to proceed to the doctrine of answers.

CHAP. VI.

The Doctrine of Answers.

Of Answers, there be three kinds useful to Pluck; the answer indirect, the answer equivocal, the answer per accidens;* whereof the two first do agree as genus and species. To these three hath one other of late been added by philosophers; that is to say, the answer impudent, which verily, if well managed, doth contribute not a little in the production of Pluck, yet by itself availeth not, wherefore it is practised but seldom.

Of the answer indirect take the example following; for in this last examination, a certain gentleman being asked in what year was the flood, answered that "the flood covered the highest mountains; but being asked again the same question, he replied thereto, that "the flood of Deucalion is not supposed to have prevailed except over Greece;" whereon the examiner asked yet a third time the same question, and received for answer, that "many shells are yet to be found in proof of the flood."

* Called also taking a shy which is here used in the second intention; for verily in the common use of language, shys are taken only at Proctors, the windows of tutors, lamps and the like.

Of the answer equivocal take the following example: a person was asked of what substance were the walls of Plataea? whereto he answered that "one side was of the same substance with the other side;" but being asked again, he said that "the substance at the top differed not from the substance at the bottom."

Of the answer per accidens, as followeth: to the question where is Sicily, cometh answer, "in the deserts of Siberia, near the Cape of Good Hope;" to the question who were the Pelasgi, cometh answer that "the Pelasgi were two crows, which settled one at Dodona, the other at Jerusalem;" to the question which party conquered at Phillippi, cometh answer "Nebuchadnezzar.*"

* There is another answer in the records, which some philosophers do consider to be the answer impudent; but the learned W* in his last edition putteth it down as the answer per accidens, which is this. For a person being asked who was Moses, answered, that "he won the last Derby." This next also admitteth of discussion: for Mr. G* being asked, "who were the major and minor Prophets," answered thereto that "he liked not to make invidious distinctions."

Of the answer impudent, there is but one example of note; for a person being asked in what way the pyramids were built, according to Herodotus, answered thereto, that "he was a gentleman and not a bricklayer."

Thus much for the examiner, the person examined, the subject, the question, and the answer; whence it is to be seen clearly, that, as respecteth demeanour at examination, it is best for Pluck that the examiner be morose; that the person examined be nervous and idle; that the subject be such as he comprehendeth not; that the questions be many and difficult; and that the answers be per accidens.

CHAP. VII.

Distinctions of Little-Go and Great-Go.

Now all this, together with the two former books, hath been said of Great-go indeed particularly, yet also of Little-go, the appurtenances of which Great-go compriseth, as was before said. Yet since there be some things wherein these two do differ, it followeth to detail these things in order, that so the apprehension of the whole art may be full and perfect. Thus first, Little-go admitteth not of divinity, which Great-go admitteth of, nay requireth; second, Little-go cometh always before Great-go, but Great-go never cometh before Little-go ; third, Little-go adhereth rather to strictness of rule, but Great-go to philosophy of things ; fourth, Little-go requireth not examiners of a first class, which Great-go requireth ; fifth, Little-go in comparison with Great-go admitteth but little of paper work ; sixth, Little-go admitteth not sciences nor writing of Greek ; seventh, Little-go hath no classes, which Great-go hath.

CHAP. VIII.

Examples of approved Plucks.

And now that these distinctions of Little-go and Great-go have been fully set forth, it remaineth firstly, to give some examples of approved Plucks for imitation, taken from the records of Oxford ; secondly, to lay down certain topics, whereby to argue that a man will be plucked or not ; and thirdly, to make a classification of Plucks according to the matter ; whereof the second especially is much needed for helps to betting.

Examples of approved Plucks are the following.

The case of Geoffrey C, who verily at Eton was counted no small genius, being able to write forty good lines of Latin poesy in the hour ; yet when he came to , taking much pains he forgot all at last, and so was plucked.

The case of Thomas T who went up for Little-go, knowing his books well, yet returned not in triumph, for that out of spite to the examiner, as he declared, he answered every question wrongways.

The case of John D*, commonly called Jack o'Dandy, who because that his brothers had been plucked, arguing it unlikely that he also should come to be plucked, gave himself up to racing and hunting; yet was he cut short. For being asked in Little-go were Athens was, he answered "in the Hebrides;" nevertheless, after two Plucks, he passed through Little-go in triumph, and so in due time he came to Great-go, which also he passed in triumph after three Plucks; whereon he gave a supper yet remembered and to be remembered.

The case of John F*, who indeed had read not a little, and thereby being certain of a pass, nevertheless was plucked. For truly many friends offering to bet with him that he would pass, he took their bets with the cunning intent of demeaning himself ill; for his debts were many, especially to Mr. P for horses. Thereupon when his examination came, he did his best to be plucked and so succeeded, pocketing thereby many hundreds.

The case of Paul P*, who on the morning of his examination, did eat eleven sausages, one cold chicken, five slices of ham, three eggs, yea and toast with bread and butter besides, in quantity not to be conceived ; whereby he thought to make himself courageous, yet was mistaken, for he gained nought thereby save a Pluck and a head-ache. Nevertheless he passed next time, although he was fat exceedingly, whence had a wit said of him, that he was too fat to squeeze through. Yet are wits sometimes wrong, as in this case, the reason whereof is, that they do for the most part choose what is funny, rather than what is true.

The case of Joseph J, who being in love, meditated thereon till his Great-go came, wherein being plucked he cleared twenty thousand pounds. For indeed, when he got home, he wisely told the lady to be plucked was the greatest honour in Oxford : whereby gaining admiration, he came to be married next week. So he quitted College, yet first paid a visit to the examiner with many thanks.

The case of Andrew B, who having put up his name, thinking himself ready for Little-go, was told by his tutor afterward, that he was sure to come to a Pluck ; yet scorned he to take his name down, and therefore was plucked with no small glory.

The case of Henry *, in this last examination, who, when he was examined, answered each question with a pun was not understood ; so when he came to be plucked, the examiner said of him to a friend in secret, (which was afterward told, as is common at Oxford, in public,) that he was witty but not wise, thereby meaning that he would have passed but for his puns which he made.

The case of a gentleman, whose name shall not be mentioned in this place, who indeed laughed exceedingly at another for being plucked, yet in the end was plucked himself, for that he could not write Latin.

The case of Abel P, who was plucked in Little-go, and afterward added thereto so many other honours, that none were left for those that followed.

So much for instances of approved Plucks, whereon it seemeth fit to notice, that sometimes one ignorance only, as of Euclid, leadeth to Pluck, as also one idleness only, as of smoking. Yet to him who aimeth at Pluck, it is best to make sure of it by many idlenesses and many ignorances, whereby his Pluck will be more certain before examination and more perfect afterward.

CHAP. IX.

Topics concerning Pluck.

For arguing that a man will be plucked take the Topics following, which are writ according to the manner indeed of Aristotle, but with allowance for modern times: now among men likely to be plucked are these for the most part.

He that hath no friends, he that hath many friends;* the first, because he hath none to put him in the way to escape Pluck; the second, because he hath many to draw him therefrom. He that liketh good eating. He that liketh good drinking. He that goeth to Ascot races. He that buyeth many cigars; for he that buyeth many smoketh many, and he that smoketh many wasteth much time in smoke, and he that wasteth much time in smoke is idle, and he that is idle is likely to be plucked. He that loungeth in Quad. He that is often proctorized. He that hath much money; he that hath no money; for the first hath too many pleasures, and the last too little time, since he must needs spend time in getting money. He that readeth many books. He that readeth few books. He that readeth no books. He that readeth novels, for verily pleasant things are novels and entice the mind away exceedingly. He that sporteth not his oak. He that taketh no exercise, as was the case with Mr. Benjamin B, who indeed did read sixteen hours a day for three years, yet did never pass for that he fainted thrice in the schools. He that sporteth many new whips. He that mixeth punch well; for truly is punch well mixed, sweet to the taste of all but most to the mixer. He that keepeth more than one large dog. He that drinketh out of a fox's head. He that hath a large bill at the pastry cook's for such an one liketh good eating which was before shewn to produce Pluck. He that hath many large bills, for such an one hath doubtless one large bill at the pastry cooks'. He that hath many little bills, for such an one hath doubtless one large bill. He that is in love. He that hath been in love, for he is likely so to be again. He that knoweth many pretty girls. He that knoweth one pretty girl. He that roweth overmuch in eight-oared boats. He that hateth Greek. He that was often flogged at school. He that was never flogged at school. He that is his own master. He that writeth not his own essays but employeth a barber. He that thinketh himself clever. He that thinketh himself a fool. He that despiseth the tutor's lectures, for such an one thinketh himself clever. He that prideth himself on his coat. He that prideth himself on his waistcoat, for the same prideth himself also on his coat. He that prideth himself on his trowsers, for the same prideth himself on his waistcoat also. He that is careless in little things. He that is careless in great things. He that is over-careful in trifles. He that hath his common books finely bound, for such an one careth only for their outside, moreover he is fearful of soiling them with over use. He that hath in his rooms an easy chair, wherein he constantly sitteth. He that hath a private tutor from the first, for needs must such an one learn to depend not on himself. He that cometh from a large school, for needs must such an one have many friends. He that cutteth chapel often. He that getteth up his Greek Testament in chapel. He that scribbleth in chapel. He that being poor sporteth Champagne. He that betteth and loseth many times. He that hath gone a second time to a dog fight. He that playeth oftentimes at billiards, yet playeth not well after all. He that is of a nervous nature. He that is a radical albeit his father is a tory, for such an one thinketh himself clever. He that useth a high-priced walking stick. He that weareth his hat cocked. He that weareth white kid gloves when shooting, for such an one is over careful in trifles, and therefore careth not for things important. He that belongeth not to the debating society, for such an one hath no interest for present history, how then for ancient, that is for Latin and Greek? He that driveth tandems. He that writeth poesy. He that hunteth more than twice a week. He that doeth what his acquaintances please. He that hath more than seven pairs of top boots. He that always weareth a tattered cap and gown. He that getteth tipsy of a morning. He that breaketh lamps in the street. He that learneth more than two instruments of music. He that eateth much pudding. He that hath an over-pity for others that are plucked, for verily he pitieth others because he feareth for himself.* He that eateth much on the morning before examination. He that rideth often yet not well. He that rideth steeple-chases often. He that hath many German pipes. He that hath a lock of hair in his desk. He that feareth shame overmuch. He that disregardeth shame. He that thinketh he will be plucked. He that thinketh he will not be plucked. Now if thou knowest a man to be in one of these predicaments thou mayest suppose him likely to be plucked; if thou knowest a man to be in two or three, thou mayest guess he will be plucked; but if thou knowest a man to be in sixteen or seventeen, thou mayest bet in safety, since he will be plucked for a certainty.

* Vide Aristot. Rhet. lib. ii. cap. 23.

Vide Aristotle's Analysis of Pity.

E

Thus much for Little-go and Great-go together; then for Great-go, they likely to be plucked in Great-go are these following. He that was plucked in Little-go. He that made a shave in Little-go. He that passed Little-go with ease, for he will take no pains towards his Great-go. He that gave a party after passing Little-go, for verily such an one esteemed his Little-go difficult, much more therefore his Great-go. He that gave a party after being plucked in Little-go, for such an one had no shame. He that was idle just before Little-go. He that took off his name at Little-go. He that was nervous in Little-go, for truly much more nervous will he be in Great-go. He that was flippant in Little-go. He that in Little-go wrote two pieces of Latin.

CHAP. X.

A Classification of Plucks according to the matter.

These be they likely to be plucked, whereby a man may judge almost for a certainty if he wish to bet on a friend. For the classification of Plucks according to the matter; they are to be put in the same gradations with Passes; for a first class in Pluck is got by him that hath the highest ignorance, as in Passes by him that hath the lowest knowledge. So also of seconds, thirds, and fourths, all which do follow in regular proportion, and therefore need not further account of them in this place. Let every man therefore try for a first for so shall he make sure at the least of his second or third; to which honours there is but this draw back only, that they are not registered in the books, nor advertised in newspapers. Yet it is to be hoped that in the gradual progression of ignorance, this also will be brought about by the worthy reformers of these times.

CHAP. XI.

Conclusion. •

Such is a classification of Plucks according to the matter; and so to conclude, let me say that this Treatise is now finished, wherein I take to myself no small glory, as having been the inventor of a new art never before known. Yet am I not ignorant that as it is new, so it must needs be imperfect in part, which imperfections let future editors mend as occasion shall call. For that this art being once begun, will progress no farther is a thing not to be conceived; when is brought to mind its great use in helping men to be plucked on principle which before was done at random. So that henceforth when a man is plucked, no person can say it was by accident or mistake of his, seeing that all the ways leading to Pluck have been here put down in strict order of philosophy. Wherefore from this time when a man hath gained a Pluck after much pains taking to that end, let no person be so unjust as to take away from him the credit thereof, and give it to others; nay, rather let every one say, that he deserved what he got for his labour: and so I wish my reader farewell, hoping from what I have writ, he may understand fully the true way to get plucked and so act accordingly.

PLUCK
EXAMINATION PAPERS
FOR CANDIDATES
AT OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE
IN 1836.

WHEREIN THE THEORY OF THE ART HOW TO BE PLUCKED IS EXHIBITED IN PRACTICE;
THUS COMPLETING THE END OF THE ENTIRE SCIENCE.

BY
SCRIBLERUS REDIVIVUS,
AUTHOR OF
THE ART OF BEING PLUCKED AND SYNOPSIS OF DRINKING.

OXFORD:
HENRY SLATTER, HERALD OFFICE,
HIGH STREET.
1836.

SCRIBLERUS REDIVIVUS

TO THE READER.

LEARNED reader, as the perfection of an art consisteth in the excellence of its theory, so the excellence of an artificer consisteth in the perfection of his practice. For it is a small thing to know how to get plucked, unless thou gettest plucked also, and that, both many times, and thoroughly, and with ease.

For this purpose I present thee in this book with some Pluck Examination Papers, whereby thou shalt be able to turn thy science in pluck to account; and procure for thyself at the least a second class in pluck, if not a first, which is to be preferred. As respecteth the plan of the book, it resembleth all other examination papers of Oxford and Cambridge, like to them pointing out the degree of ignorance that is required for the gaining of honours. It behoveth thee, however, to bear in mind, that this book of papers containeth rather a collection of the most needful papers from many sets, than one entire set, which accounteth for the little quantity of Latin and Greek, as well as for certain other differences which thou wilt readily perceive; as, for example, the two pieces of English for translation, and the greater number of pages than be usual in one set of examination papers. Thou wilt also observe that sciences be introduced in these papers, somewhat beyond what is absolutely needful for being plucked, yet did it seem to me best, rather to run hazard of being too comprehensive than too meagre. Concerning the authors here quoted, I leave thee to discover respecting them, not choosing to lay open the secrets of examinations. Nevertheless if thou wilt come and be my pupil in the art, I promise not but I will explain to thee even these secrets; and thus get thee plucked much more easily than will even Mr. A*, or Mr. B, or Mr. C.

To conclude, I beg thee to understand these things in the way they be meant, not following the evil practice of some persons, who are wont to understand of an author, that he meaneth to ridicule things sacred or grave, because his book toucheth thereon of necessity sometimes, and who do thus distort his meaning, looking not to the context. Such persons, it seemeth to me, do forget, that from the nature of things human, every book, like a glass, changeth its feature according to the feature of him that is looking therein; or rather indeed, that every book is likened to a certain young lady of Oxford, concerning whom, as she walketh along High-street, Mr. T. saith that she is horrible, Mr. L. that she is ugly, Mr. F. that she is bad looking, Mr. A. that she is passable, Mr. G. that she is good looking; another Mr. A. that she is pretty, Mr. P. that she is handsome, Mr. F. that she is beautiful, and Mr. N. that she is lovely, not according as the truth is, but according as he chooseth from his preconceived fancy to think of the different parts. Thus one praiseth her blue eye, but another condemneth the same. One thinketh a curl too long, but another desireth it to be cut. Of such an error touching this book I beg thee to beware, except in the matter of praising, for thou hast free leave to praise it as much as thou wilt, in return for which I will not cease wishing thee to be rusticated a second time, or even to be expelled, if thou so desireth.

PLUCK

EXAMINATION PAPERS.

To be translated into your worst Attic Greek, in the style of Thucydides, where he is describing the character of Themistocles, Lib. i. cap. 138.

FOR Mr. Flashman was a person in whom most truly was manifested a natural strength of head, wherein he was worthy of admiration beyond any other man of his college. For by this strength of head alone, and without aid of instruction, he was enabled to drink all others tipsy, and not become drunk himself till he chose. Moreover he was the best discerner of Proctors at a distance, and in respect of things to come, could predict for certain whether a man would be rusticated or expelled for an action. Also no man better than he perceived where he could run on tick; and he knew at once, by his natural sagacity, when it was time to leave his old tradesman, and begin a new bill elsewhere. Likewise there was no steeple-chase that he went not to, yet of him it could never be said that he was spilled. And to say all in a few words, this man, by the power of his understanding, did contrive to get numberless others rusticated and plucked, but never suffered himself either the one or the other, being considered a person of most discreet behaviour by his tutor, albeit in real truth he was the most noisy man of his time. Let so much have been said of his character. But having thus honourably passed his college career, he became a sincere clergyman, sporting a white tie, nor ever breaking a poor man's gate out hunting, but when it was difficult to get through otherwise.

From the Secret History of Oxford and Cambridge, as translated by Hobbes of Malmsbury.

Or else the following into your worst Ionic, in the style of Herodotus.

In the Atlantic Ocean, and nigh upon Cornwall, are some islands called anciently

Cassiterides, or the tin islands, but now sur-named Silly, which are much to be admired for their wonderful use and excellence. For therein does tin grow in such plenty that the inhabitants pass a most loveable life, being ever able to pay their debts, from having plenty of tin. These islands were first discovered, according to tradition, by a man of Cambridge, who being plucked on a time, and having likewise great debts, determined nobly to go in search of them upon the bare report. Therefore letting himself down at night time from his college window, while the porter slept, and being armed with an Ainsworth's dictionary for defence, he descended to the Cam, and taking a skiff went along with the stream, through much wild and barbarous country, as was to be expected in those times; till in the end, after ten days' travel, he reached the sea coast, with much danger from the savages, which nevertheless he escaped bravely, by wielding of his dictionary. From the coast he proceeded by land till he came opposite to a small island, which having reached by swimming, he found thereon much tin, lying in heaps of sovereigns along the shore. Likewise the trees had for leaves bank notes, whereof some were of five pound and others of ten pound, according to their age. Seeing which, he stuffed his pockets, not excepting even his fob, with the last mentioned, wisely neglecting the first. But perceiving the islanders to approach, he was forced to flee, and thus escaping to land by swimming reached Cambridge in thirteen days, where he paid all his own debts, besides those of his friends, albeit not a few of the notes had been destroyed by the salt water. Since his time many undergraduates in debt have gone on the same journey, but as yet no one hath succeeded, which is much to be lamented.

A True and Faithful Account of the Cassiterides, or Tin Islands, by Herodotus Britannicus, in his History of Undergraduates.

Historical Questions.

1. Give a particular account of the earliest town and gown rows recorded in history. Are there supposed to have been gown and town rows in Athens when it was the University of the world ?

2. Does history say how many caps were broken in the last gown and town row, when Oxford was entertained by the Queen ?

3. Livy says, that the " equites " of Rome were called " celeres " originally. How does Niebuhr prove this to be an historical fable, signifying that the Roman knights were generally fast men ?

4. Give an account of the number of horses driven to death last term, and compare the cavalry of Alexander with that of Oxford and Cambridge.

5. What historical associations are connected with brandy and water ? Give an account of the rise and progress of drinking in the Universities, and shew in what way our ancestors used to get drunk when at college. Give also a correct analysis of that philosophical work called Oxford Night Caps.

6. We read in the history of Greece, that it was first peopled by means of migrations. Shew how the same principle still works at Oxford and Cambridge. And explain the terms "licet migrare," and "exeat," by an historical reference to the causes which in general produce these migrations from one college to another. What was the most famous migration of this sort last term ?

7. Give a full account of the last steeple-chase, detailing minutely the different falls that occurred, and what parts were bruised. Draw also a map of the ground, and explain the geographical position of each rider and of his horse respectively at the close of the chase.

8. How long ago is it since the wild beasts were in the town ? Give a clear narrative of the row which occurred with the authorities on that occasion. Who was the gentleman with a glazed hat, who told one of the authorities that he might go to a place that need not be mentioned ? and what did he gain in return for this proper exhibition of spirit ?

9. Give a succinct account of the origin of the Debating Society, explaining the alterations in its government since its commencement, and the influence of certain laws lately passed, towards producing a democratic spirit.

10. Draw up a statistical account of the impositions set last term ; distinguishing between those which were written by the man himself, and those which were paid for. Explain likewise in what parts of the town those persons live who gain an honest livelihood by writing impositions for the men ; and conclude by drawing up a table of the fluctuation in prices paid for impositions during the last ten years. Compare likewise the Cambridge and Oxford system of impositions.

11. How many bulldogs receive bloody noses on an average every term, and at what period of history did the application of the term bulldog first begin ?

1. Under what class of revenue do you put the income derived from knocking in ? Compare the revenue of Oxford, in this point of view, with that of Athens in the time of Aristides.

2. Describe faithfully the last match at pigeon shooting.

3. Who is the best tailor in the University? Account for the invention of swallow-tailed coats, and describe accurately the rise and progress of pea-jackets, and in what their flashness consists.

4. What Greek books burn best for lighting a cigar?

5. Give a clear account, with the chronology, of the painting red of all the doors of Christ Church, and compare this with the mutilation of the Mercuries at Athens, before the expedition to Sicily.

6. Shew what may be learnt of the history of the University from the philosophy of its flash language. State the metaphysical derivation of the Cambridge words mumpton and spitting a cantilene; and explain the principle upon which it is that Cambridge men use more terms of this kind than Oxford men.

7. Niebuhr, from observing that caps have tassels, and that the streets of Oxford are not macadamized, comes to the conclusion that the University was originally inhabited by Pelasgi, which he further confirms by observing, that the inhabitants of it depart and return periodically, according to the vacations, in which we see the very migratory principle of the Pelasgi exemplified. State the force of the argument.

8. Explain the use of dumb-bells and pokers in storming citadels, comparing the late attack of the undergraduates upon the Theatre with the siege of Plataea. It is reported that one of the dumb-bells was covered with red leather; shew that this is contrary to fact, from your own observation.

Translate into your worst English the following account of an event at Cambridge, last term.

Jamque, duobus lampadibus fractis, contra eam quæ tertia stat in vico, progrediebantur, quum subito, laniariis canibus stipatus, Proctor supervenit. Is jam antea, dum in inferiore vici parte versatur, sonitus gliscentes audiverat; quibus excitus, collegâ relicto, ad tumultum cum majore copiarum parte, summa celeritate processit. Ejus adventu perculsi proximi duo fugam capessunt. Tres jamdudum vino gravati, et pugnare et fugere æque impotentes, manu statim capti sunt. Hos ad collegias suas Proctor ferri jubet. Ipse duobus canibus stipatus cæteros duo persequitur, quorum alter dux facinoris fuerat. Et ille quidem comitem arripiens "curramus" inquit; "Proctor adest. Cito pede opus est." His dictis, ambo per vicum quemdam devium versus rivum profugiunt. Proctor cum canibus insequitur. Jamque togati juvenes marginem prope rivi tetigerant, quum alter, pede lapso, in gramen humidum sternitur; alter (atque idem dux facinoris fuit) a cane arreptus, sanguineum nasum ei dat, deinde in rivum se projicit, ad ripam oppositam nando se laturus. Hic Proctor paulisper se inhibuit, neque enim nare didicerat et Autumnus erat: duorum præterea ejus canium alter togatum juvenem qui prolapsus erat, vix tenebat; alter sanguineum suum nasum abstergens vix cernere præ lachrymis potuit. Jamque dux facinoris ad alteram prope ripam accesserat, quum subito, Proctore scapham per marginem quærente, canis vulneratus pudore victus in rivum salit. Celeriter ad ripam oppositam pervenit. Illic dubius in noctis tenebris, ad quem locum hostis se abripuisset, per duas horas frustra se versat, omnes locos explorans. Re infecta ad Proctorem super pontem redit. Proxima die Proctor concilium collegæ et Proproctorum vocat. Rem cunctam, quo ordine gesta fuerat, exponit. Tribus togatis qui primi capti sunt quingenti versus imponuntur. Ille qui ad rivum prolapsus erat ad rusticandum terminum it. Dux facinoris non punitur, neque enim agnoscere potest.

LIVIOS NOVUS, lib. viii. cap. 7.

Moral Essay.

The evil tendency of reading slow in chapel considered with respect to breakfast parties and hunting appointments; shewing how far a man has a moral right to read slow; and what, according to Aristotle's theory of the habits, are the proper requisites in a human being for getting fast through a chapter of the Old Testament.

Translate the following into the style of Horace's Epistles, as badly as you can, introducing the greatest number of false quantities that you can think of.

A tradesman's son, whom once I knew,
 No matter when, or where, or who,
 Bred at the desk to daily rounds
 From pounds to pence, and pence to pounds,
 Seiz'd with a sudden fit for knowledge,
 Determin'd straight to go to College ;
 The thing was done as soon as said,
 A cap with tassel decks his head ;
 He buys three teacups of his scout,
 One with a saucer, two without,
 And by kind Alma takes his stand,
 With gown on back, and stick in hand.
 Friends call and ask him out to dine,
 To breakfast some, and some to wine ;
 Saving is what he takes delight in,
 He goes whenever they invite him ;
 On others' wine gets wondrous merry,
 And, drunk with port, still calls for sherry.
 Meanwhile to pence and farthings true,
 Though rich as Croesus, or a Jew ;

He quite forgets to ask his friends,
 To taste his own, and make amends ;
 "The man is stingy," flew about,
 "Stingy's the word," his friends cried out,
 And straight devised, from animosity,
 To trick him into generosity !
 "I've heard," says one, "you've got some port,
 "Of a most truly wondrous sort ;
 "Let's have a taste, I wish to try it,
 "And if you choose would like to buy it!"
 This said, he op'd the bin, and spied
 Four dozen bottles side by side,
 Demands two forks, the cork to draw,
 And finds the wine without a flaw !
 Just at this time, (as 'twas agreed,
 In case the first friend should succeed,) Another thirsty friend drops in,
 "Oh, ho," says he, "you've op'd your bin !
 "Give me a glass, we'll drink at ease,
 "Or else a tumbler, which you please."
 He takes a chair, (of which were plenty,)
 No sooner sat, the bottle's empty !
 Another bottle sees the light,
 Another friend appears in sight,
 Walks up the staircase, kicks the door,
 Drinks up his glass and calls for more ;
 Our host reluctant, sees his cheer
 Like smoke appear and disappear ;
 While drinkers fresh come every minute,
 And seem to take a pleasure in it.
 At last, when all his wine is gone,
 Himself grown drunk from looking on,

Runs into Quad, kicks up a row,
 And breaks four panes, he don't know how,
 For which next morning he is fated
 For two terms to be rusticated ;
 And learns at last, in his sobriety,
 How to get drunk with due propriety ;
 Nor when to tippling he is prone,
 To swill his friends', but spare his own.

A Fact of 1833, versified in the manner of Swift.

Historical Essay.

The origin of boat races in the University, with a detailed account of the principal victories gained in them since their commencement, tracing their influence upon the morals and studies of the place, and comparing the Athenian navy at the death of Pericles with the navy of Oxford and Cambridge.

To be translated into your worst Latin Prose, in the style of Cicero's Orations.

Mr. President, the honourable member is mistaken ; for I beg leave to affirm, in the most distinct and positive manner, that when I said of the honourable member that he spoke an untruth, I meant nothing whatever against his private character. But to return to the question before the house, if there be any gentleman here who has at heart the interests of this society, and therefore of the University, and therefore of the world; if there be any gentleman here who respects virtue and reveres antiquity; I beseech him again and again to consider most seriously the disastrous consequences that must inevitably result from the admission of dogs, however small, into the reading room. It is very easy for honourable members to say that dogs are admitted at the sister University; that it is a shame to keep them out in the street, while we ourselves are sitting snug over our newspapers; or that they will always be barking at the door so long as they are kept out. All this is very easy to say, Mr. President; but I appeal to facts; I appeal to the articles and ancient statutes of this society, in which it is expressly stated that dogs be not admitted. I am sure I have no enmity against dogs, Mr. President. They are very useful and excellent animals in their place ; but if once admitted into our reading room, be assured they will overturn the inkstands ; they will tear the books to pieces ; they will smear the carpet with mud from the streets ; they will dirty the trousers of honourable members ; and finally and eventually will not rest, till the ancient honours of this society are become the common property of the scum of creation.

Speech by a Tory in the Debating Society at Cambridge, against the admission of dogs into the reading room.

Or the following, in the style of Cicero's philosophical works.

The custom of sending in bills to young men at college, is a thing plainly contrary to the usages of morality and the principles of religion. But what is more than all this, it is opposed to my doctrine of expediency, as is to be seen in the following respects. It curtails generosity, that noblest principle of our nature, since men sometimes do not give champagne at parties because they cannot afford it, and are afraid of having to pay for it afterwards. It condemns the human species to innumerable petty vexations, for the sight of bills is odious to all, especially when one has no money. It corrupts that serenity of mind which philosophy requires. It has a strong tendency to destroy all charitable feelings between a gentleman and his tradesman. It checks the circulation of capital, for it prevents tradesmen from failing. It gives shopkeepers a facility of cheating, enabling them as it does to send in the same bill twice with additions of what one never bought. It promotes the extinction of the gentry; for if a man pays he loses his money, if he does not pay, his honour. Such are some few of the evil consequences which result from the too prevalent custom of sending in bills; an impropriety on the part of tradesmen which deserves strong censure from the legislative powers. It is to be confessed, indeed, that if the custom were destroyed, it would occasion the misery of some few private shopkeepers, but what is this compared with the happiness of the whole human race, more especially the higher classes of it, which, to all appearance, have the opposite principle of not paying implanted in their nature, (for here I am constrained to allow a moral sense,) as one of the first duties of morality.

From Paley's Moral Philosophy, in Lord Brougham's improved edition.

Critical Questions.

Explain the use of the word Brick in the following sentences:—As fast as a brick. As slow as a brick. As idle as a brick. To read like a brick. To run like a brick. To swear like a brick. To ride like a brick. To be as drunk as a brick. To be a brick. As hungry as a brick. An old brick. A young brick. Do you suppose this phrase to be borrowed from ancient authors? If so, what author is it who uses the corresponding Latin or Greek term in the same manner?

2. Explain the expressions “you’re sold;” and “a fine sell;” and shew from the Antigone what Greek word is used in the same manner.

3. Soft fades the sun ; the moon is sunk to sleep ;
Through heaven's blue fringe the stars serenely peep.

An azure calm floats o'er the breathing sky,
Like Memory brooding over days gone by ;
And while the owls in tender notes complain,
Grim Silence holds her solitary reign.

From which of the Oxford or Cambridge Prize Poems are these lines taken? Explain their beauties, and give parallel passages.

4. Has any Prize Poem appeared for the last ten years at Oxford or Cambridge, without the sun, moon, or stars in it? Explain the use of these great auxiliaries to verse-making; and shew how inferior the ancients are to the moderns in the number of their suns, moons, and stars.

5. Are you acquainted with any other use of the sun and moon besides this use of helping writers of prize poems? Give reasons why these authors have not made an equal use of comets, especially when modern science has discovered there are so many to spare.

6. Trace analogically the application of the word coach, when it is said by a man, that he has "just taken such a coach to help him through his small."

7. Longinus says of swearing, "Ἔστι δὲ οὐ τὸ ὀπωσοῦν τινα ὁμόσαι μέγα, τὸ δὲ ποῦ, καὶ πῶς, καὶ ἐφ' ὧν καιρῶν, καὶ τίνος ἕνεκα. That is to say, "the excellence of swearing consists in the manner, the place, the occasion, and the object, being all fitting." Compare ancient and modern swearing in this respect, and give a philological history of swearing from the dark ages to the present times; explaining the true standard of correct swearing, from the metaphysical system of man.

8. Among old writers Plato and Xenophon are great swearers, being very frequent in their use of the term "by Jove." Compare these two great philosophers in this point of view.

1. Tres fratres Cœli navigabant roundabout Ely.

Omnes drownderunt qui swimaway non poterunt.

Shew the false quantities in these lines.

Who are the tres fratres supposed to have been? How many were drowned according to the last line? At what era of Cambridge did this important event occur? and what poet is supposed to have written the lines? Give Heyne's reading of the fourth word in the second line, and shew on what ground Porson objects to it.

2. Dr. Bentley argues that Phalaris was not plucked at college. Upon what grounds? State the argument.

3. When a man is trying to remember a thing it is common to say, that "he feels it at his fingers' ends." Shew how this expression took its rise from the custom of writing problems and chronological tables on one's nails, just before going in to be examined.

4. Explain philosophically the following terms: gip; scout; no end of clever; a tough chap; a splendid man; a shady man; and any flash terms that you can call to mind.

5. The words, mala ducis avi domum, have been construed, "thou bringest apples to the house of thy grandfather." What does Bos object to this mode of construing the words? A certain learned Oxford editor has construed, as follows, the following pieces of Latin and Greek; explain his arguments for such an interpretation of them.

Ἀμφὶ δ' ὀφθαλμοῖς φόβος.* Persæ. My eyes! if I'm not in a fright. Θαρσεῖτε παῖδες μητέρων τεθραμμένοι. Sept. contra Theb. Show your pluck, every mother's son of you. Ite capellæ. Virg. Go it, you cripples. Marinum equum. Plin. A horse marine. Ἀπονεχιῶ σου τ' ἂν πρυτανεῖω σιτλα.* I will cut off thy battels in the buttery. Nostri pugnant rari. Cæsar. Our men fought uncommon.

6. Distinguish between a drag, a tandem, a buggy, a gig, a phaeton, and a coach.

7. When Cicero designates himself as Novus homo, does he not simply mean that he was a Fresh-man? Compare the two terms.

8. Translate every oath that you use into Latin and Greek, according to the learned Dammi Lexicon.

Translate the following into your worst English.

Oh fortunatos nimium sua si bona norint
 Sleevatos bachelors ! neque enim sub sidere nightæ
 Ad bookas sweatant ; nec dum Greattomia quartam
 Lingua horam strikat, saveall sine candle tenentes,
 Ad beddam creepunt semisleepi ; nec mane prima
 Scoutus adest sævus tercentum knockibus instans
 Infelix wakare caput. Sed munera mater
 Ipsa dat Alma illis, keepuntque secantque chapellam
 Quandounque volunt. Si non velvete minaci
 Ornati incedunt, non pisces ad table higham
 Quâque die comedunt, ast illis cuttere semper
 Quemque licet tutorem, illis lectura nec ulla,
 At secura quies, et nescia pluckere vita.

1. Explain the uses of sleeves, comparing ancient and modern sleeves. What substitutes did the early Romans use for pocket handkerchiefs. Describe Cicero's pocket handkerchief, mentioning the most remarkable holes. Was it marked with his name? At which corner? In patent ink, or thread? And by which of the maids?

2. Prove to which of the Universities these verses apply from the third and sixth lines.

3. Shew from internal evidence at what period of history these lines were composed. Give the history of the most remarkable dog-latin poets; and analyse the most famous poem of this kind that has appeared in this century.

4. Porson reads shoutibus instead of knockibus. Heyne has proposed bawlibus suo periculo, and the very learned Oxford editor chooses for his reading kickibus. Shew why the present reading is preferable, from what historians tell us concerning the manner in which scouts used to wake the men in those times.

5. Does not the poet seem to exaggerate the privileges of bachelors, in what he says concerning their cutting chapel. May not this be accounted for, by supposing him to have been an undergraduate?

6. From what part of these verses does Virgil seem to have borrowed?

7. Translate the following into dog English :

Tam forte in turri, sic fama est, reading man alta
 Invigilans studiis pensum carpebat, at illum
 Startulat horrid uproar, evertitur inkstand—ibi omnis
 Effusus labor, impurus nam labitur amnis
 Ethica per Rhetoricque.—
 Qualis ubi ingentes, coacha veniente, portmantos
 Greatcoatosque bagosque humeros onerare ministri
 Bendentis vidi, quem dura ad munia mittit
 Angelus aut Mitre, vicinave stella Gazellæ.

By what poet of what era were these verses composed? Give a chronological history of the principal events in his life; mentioning whether he is noticed by any contemporary poet.—What reading has been proposed by Heyne instead of “portmantos,” for the sake of removing the false quantity? Is this poet in general very particular about his quantities? May we not infer from the expression “quem mittit Mitre,” that the author had in view a certain bishop?—What was the name of the person so poetically termed “reading man?” and to what fable is allusion made by the term “sic fama est?”—Shew how Mr. B cannot be the gentleman alluded to.

Logical and Rhetorical Questions.

1. Aristoteles novus, among other characters which he sketches in his Rhetoric, says of the freshman, as follows :

“ Now the freshman differeth from the man of standing in these respects. He often weareth his cap and gown, sometimes bearing a walking-stick also. He calleth another, “ Sir.” He speaketh of the boys at his college. He determineth on a first class, scorning less. He attendeth lecture with reverence. He approveth not the manner of dining. He respecteth the grass-plat. He thinketh at chapel that all others be looking at him. He seemeth ashamed at his own wine party, making excuses many. He putteth on a grave countenance in passing the Proctor. He looketh this way and that way in walking. He appeareth proud of something. He despiseth schoolboys. He buyeth one cigar. He beggeth your pardon if you upset his skiff. He useth often the word Governor. He buyeth a large lexicon. He thinketh it time for him to fall in love. He goeth to bed at ten. He writeth home once a fortnight. He weareth a long tassel to his cap. He payeth ready money, refusing discount as dishonourable. He telleth you concerning his uncle. He purchaseth a Calendar to see his own name therein. He toucheth the bottle with reverence. He buyeth false collars, changeth shoes for boots, sporteth straps, and of all great things considereth the University to be the greatest, whereof in his own mind himself formeth no small portion."

Explain this character by a reference to persons whom you know, and refer each point to the wrong head in the Rhetoric.

2. Illustrate Aristotle's sketch of youth, middle age, and old age, from the above character, and from the two following sketches of the same gentleman at two other stages of his college career.

The same person when he hath passed his Little-go.

He getteth tipsy twice a week. He cutteth chapel and lecture. He buyeth a pea, and taketh to him a swallow-tailed coat. He promoteth rows. He sporteth a blue and white shirt. He sweareth genteelly.

He talketh loud against bigotry. He buyeth cigars by the box. He borroweth a pink. He ridiculeth his former self. He considereth a quantity of bills to be gentlemanly. He boasteth of cutting the Proctor. He thinketh a first class a slow thing. He liketh to be seen with one who hath been rusticated. He acteth contumeliously at collections. He knocketh in late. He scorneth tea and bread and butter. He dineth seldom in hall. He preferreth shrewdness to learning. He writeth home once a term, and that for money. He buyeth translations. He considereth ladies to be a bore. He hath a good hand at whist, but chooseth rather to play with beginners. He cutteth his reading friend, as being slow. He shieth at the tutor's window, if there be others looking on. He encourageth whiskers. He killeth hacks. He selleth his large lexicon for ready money. He desireth to be in the army; considering of the University that it is a mean place, and becometh not a man that knows the world, and hath spirit.

The same when a Bachelor.

He consoleth himself by thinking that he could have done better if he had pleased. He affirmeth that he hath never enjoyed himself. He keepeth a quiet pony. He considereth a fellowship to be a good thing. He payeth his pastrycook, but not his tailor. He giveth a quiet breakfast-party twice a term. He oftentimes adviseth others. He weareth continually his cap and gown. He disputeth in divinity. He angleteth for pupils. He changeth whist and écarté for chess. He approveth of toast-and-water. He affirmeth of smoking that it is beastly. He buyeth the Waverley novels second-hand. He selleth certain of his old pictures. He writeth a pamphlet on the vices of the University. He studieth Russell's Modern Europe. He mindeth not to be seen in an old coat. He talketh of the time when he was an undergraduate. He goeth to bed at eleven. He beginneth German. He falleth in love. He getteth sweetmeats from home, and buyeth apples by bushel for dessert. He prideth himself on neatness. He buyeth a picture of his college. He respecteth himself as one that is experienced. He taketh upon him to order dinner. He considereth the University to be a decent place, and himself to be a decent member thereof.

3. All members of the University wear caps and gowns,

Some ladies wear caps and gowns ;

Therefore some ladies are members of the University.

Prove the correctness of this syllogism ; also of the following :

A man in a skiff has got sculls in the water,

Sculls contain brains,

Therefore a man in a skiff has got water in the brains.

4. Is the following a correct Sorites ?

All young ladies are agreeable ; all agreeable things are pleasant ; all pleasure is uncertain ; all uncertain things are vain ; all vanity is good for nothing ; therefore all young ladies are good for nothing.

5. Put the following argument into a syllogistic form :

“ I must say it was a great shame in the examiners to pluck such a fellow as me, especially when I have been plucked twice before by accident. And I am sure no one can say I was idle; for I read all day through the last fortnight, except on hunting days. However, I dare say the Governor wont find it out, for he is deuced slow."

6. The schoolmen define man to be "animal implume." Prove this definition to be false, from the fact that a man is capable of being plucked.

7. Are the speeches in the Debating Society to be considered as deliberative, judicial, or epideictic? Explain the singular circumstance that no mention of the Debating Society is to be found in Aristotle's Politics.

8. "We understand that Major D of W near Yarmouth, has been convicted of receiving three kegs of smuggled brandy." May not this be called an "illicit process of the major?"

9. Explain the logical distribution of a term by reference to the meaning of the word term-trotter.

10. Distinguish metaphysically between Oxford milk and Oxford cream, shewing from Plato how much water is necessary to constitute the first, and how much milk the last.

11. Explain the following remarks of Aristoteles novus in his Rhetoric upon the character of the reading man :

“ He supposeth that Henry the 8th must certainly have been a king of England, or something of the kind. He hath an indistinct idea that the Clyde is a trout stream in the West of England, or somewhere thereabouts. He expecteth to pass through Bristol on his road from Oxford to London, but not having a modern map is yet afraid to ask. He keepeth his brush and combs on the chimney piece of his sitting room. He putteth off having his hair cut till after his degree. He hath a list of his books in his desk. He laugheth at another because he knew not the father of Zerubbabel. He taketh a pill on Saturday evenings. He grieveth severely for not getting a first class. He hath a pale face. He feareth that he will make a hash of his history. He taketh a constitutional of forty minutes every day. He rideth oat once a term galloping fast, and pinning in front the tails of his coat lest they get soiled. He despiseth amusements, considering man to be a reading animal. He loungeth in quad, that he may seem idle. He weareth gloves seldom, but oftentimes appeareth in dirty shoes.

Translate the following into your worst English.

Οἱ δὲ ἐπειδὴ παρεσκεύαστο αὐτοῖς, τηρήσαντες νύκτα χειμερινὸν ὕδατι, καὶ ἀνέμῳ, καὶ ἅμα ἀσέληνου, ἐξήεσαν. Ἠγείτο δὲ Σμίθος ὅσπερ καὶ τῆς κείρας αἴτιος ἦν. Καὶ πρῶτον μὲν τρία βλάνκεττα συνδήσαντες ὑνεησαν αὐτὰ ἔξω. Τότε δὲ ὁ Σμίθος παραινέσας Θομφῶνα καὶ Ἰουσῶνα καὶ Ἰακωβῶνα δουνλέττει ἑαυτον πρὸς τὴν γῆν. Οἱ δ' ἄλλοι ἐφόλλουσαν αὐτόν. Καὶ δὴ ὁ Θομφῶν καὶ ὁ Ἰουσῶν; ἄνευ ψόφου ἐδουνηγόττησαν ὁ δὲ Ἰακωβῶν, (ὑπέρφαιτος γὰρ ἦν,) βλανκέττων τινος βρεακθέντος, φαλλδουνεῖ, καὶ τὸν πορτερόν ἐξ ὕπνου ἀνεγείρει. Οἱ ἄλλοι μὲν ἐξέφυγον: ὁ δὲ πορτερός καὶ ὑποπορτερός προσελθόντες Ἰακωβῶνα τὸν κακοδαίμονα συλλαμβάνουσι. Οἱ δὲ τρεῖς οἱ ἀποφυγόντες πολλὴν ὁδὸν ῥυνήσαντες ὡς τάχιστα, τέλος ἐστόπησαν: καὶ πολλῶν γνώμων λεχθεισῶν ἐνίκησεν ἡ τελευταία ἡ τοῦ Σμίθου, ὅτι δεῖ λάρκην ἔχειν, καὶ τότε λαρκήσαντες εἰς κολληγίαν πρὸς τὸν πορτερόν ρετύρνεϊν. τὸ δὲ ὄνομα τοῦ πορτεροῦ ἦν Ἰωάννης, καὶ τοῦ ὑποπορτεροῦ Θώμας. Ταῦτα οὖν δετερμινῆσαντες καὶ ἔπραξαν οὕτως. Πρῶτον γὰρ λίθοις ἐβρεάκησαν πάντας εἴκοσι ἐν τῷ στρήτῳ, κ. τ. λ.

The Secret History of Oxford, by THUCYDIDES NOVUS.

Put the following into bad English verse.

‘Ὡς ἔφατ’ οἱ δὲ κλάπον Μάσιχοι μάλα γηθόσσυνοι κῆρ,
 Καὶ τῶν ἰσοσύτων γένετο ἰαχὴ τε καὶ ὑπρωρ.
 Καὶ τότε Σίνκλαιρος Σκιμήριος ἄλτο χαρᾶζε·
 Πολλὰς ἔχων παπέραι, καὶ σῶμ’ Αἴαντι εἰκοῦς.
 Τὸν Λοῖδην δὲ κάκ’ ὀσσομένοσ προσέφη τε καὶ εἶπεν· “ Τίποτε μέλει ὑμῖν, Μάσιχοι, ὅτι Ῥάμβλερός εἰμι ;
 Καὶ τί πότι’ ἐστ’ ὑμῖν αὐθώριτί με πρηφέντειν ;
 Ἄλλ’ ὀδ’ ἀνὴρ Μασίχης περὶ πάντων ἔμμεναὶ ἄλλων,
 Πάντων δὲ ῥυλεῖν ἐθέλει, καὶ πάντας ἀβύζειν,
 Πᾶσι δὲ κομμανδεῖν· ἄτιν’ οὐ πείσσοθαι οἶω.
 Εἰ δὲ μιν εὐσπάκοιτ’ ἔθεσαν θεοὶ αἰὲν εἶοντες
 Τούνεκά οἱ προθέουσι ὄνειδεα πᾶσι λέγεσθαι ;
 Πάντας δὲ ἐξπέλλειν ἀγαθοὺσ τρεῖουσι Μασεῖχοι,
 Οἷσ αἰεὶ τοι ἔρισ τε φίλη πόλεμοί τε μάχαι τέ.
 Μῆδ’ οὕτωσ κλάσσομαν πέρ εἶων, Μασίχη θέοειδεσ,
 Κλέπτε νόφ’ ἐπεὶ οὐ ψήφφ ἐξπέλλειαι ἡμᾶσ.”

UNIOMACHIA.

1. To what alteration in the constitution of the Union do these verses allude ?

2. What is understood by the disputed term 'Ράμβλερος? Do you agree with the learned editor in supposing it must have meant some opposition society, which has been gradually destroyed in the progress of college generations?

3. Who was the hero Μασίχης, and what do we know of his history? Discuss this.

4. Dunderheadius explains Σίνκλαιρος, by a reference to the Saxon language. Give any explanation of your own that you think better.

5. Explain the term εὐσπηκουτ', mentioning who is the best speaker in the Union at present, and of what country he is. Also what the last motion was that he introduced, and whether it passed or not.

Questions in Moral Philosophy.

1. Prove the morality of swearing from the Bible and the nature of man.

2. Shew from Whately, whether Sunday is most properly spent in reading Thucydides and Algebra, or in playing at écarté and drinking claret. Discuss this.

3. According to Locke's theory of ideas, we are to consider the human mind as a piece of blank paper. Does the philosopher here mean brown paper, whity brown paper, or white paper, according to the coarseness of men's minds? Or does he mean white paper only? And if the last, what sort of white paper? whether hot pressed or fools-cap? Give reasons for preferring the latter, and discuss the subject.

4. Aristotle in his Ethics lays down the biting of one's nails to be the height of vice. Prove from this that he agreed with Paley in considering the seat of morals to be in one's fingers' ends.

5. Connect Plato's theory with New College puddings, and discuss the latter subject.

6. Defend upon philosophical principles the conduct of Paley, in having a large and small hole cut in his door for his cat and kitten. What was the colour of this famous cat? and what of its remarkable actions in the philosopher's study are recorded?

7. Discuss the theory which justifies men in taking freshmen's caps and gowns, instead of their own old academics, when at a party.

8. Make clear the correctness of the following reasons for cutting a man, according to Aristotle's doctrine of friendship in the Ethics :

“A man may be cut, because he has got on an old coat. Because he has got on a white hat in winter. Because he has taken to reading. Because he has splashed you out hunting. Because he has taken a scholarship. Because he advised you. Because you have found a new acquaintance. Because he would not go with you to W in a tandem. Because he would not get tipsy at your request. Because he has taken to wearing his cap and gown. Because he would not carry into chapel for you the second volume of Jacob Faithful.

Because he refused to meet C at a wine party. Because his wine is bad. Because his rooms are up three pair of stairs, and therefore difficult to be got at. Because another man says he is an ass. Because he would not go with you on the river. Because his hat is narrow brimmed. Because you find it a bore to nod. Because his dog hurt yours. Because his skiff running against yours hurt your middle finger. Because he got a new novel before you, although your name was down first. Because he beat you at pigeon shooting. Because he would not let you break your own decanter. Because he was spilled. Because he is against Dr. Hampden. Because he shews the white of his stockings.

Questions in Divinity.

1. Who was the third cousin once removed of Tiglath Pelezer's great nephew?
2. What sort of stone was that which David made use of, and were there any others in the brook like it?

3. How often is that important word "and" repeated in the New Testament?

Mathematical Questions.

1. A bets B a certain sum that he will drive a tandem past the Proctor in daylight. B bets C the same sum, that he will ride through the College quadrangle. The Proctor imposes on B three times as many lines as he bet shillings, and the Vice on A fourteen and a half times as many lines as he bet pounds. What was the original sum bet?

2. A Freshman engages to eat a sponge cake while a Bachelor is drinking a bottle of port. The Bachelor begins half a second before the Freshman, and has reached his ninth glass by the time that the Freshman is swallowing the sixth mouthful. How long will it be before the Freshman is choked?

3. A and B had drunk two bottles and a quarter of Port at the proportionate rate of three to five. A bets B, after this, that he shall be able to distinguish between port and sherry after sipping six times of each alternately. He is blindfolded accordingly, and ceases to distinguish when he has sipped half as many times as B had drunk more glasses than himself. How many glasses had A drunk before he began sipping?

4. Drink half a pint of negus, add to this a pint of beer, seven and a half glasses of Sherry, a bottle and a quarter of Port, three glasses of brandy, a tumbler of rum, and four drops of water. What will be the result?

5. At what angle with the horizon is a tipsy man most easily upset, according to Newton?

6. Reconcile this philosopher's theory of gravitation with the saying, that when such a man was going home from a party the ground rose up and hit him on the nose.

7. At what ratio of velocity will an empty bottle in concussion with a nose break the nose in question? Explain this mathematical process of reduction to vulgar fractions.

8. Account for the phenomenon in acoustics, that the sound of your voice in calling the porter from your room up three pair of stairs travels at a ratio proportionate to your tips.

9. Explain Newton's theory concerning the antagonistic principles of undergraduates and chapel.

10. Allowing every man in the University to have six friends, each of whom has six friends, and so on; at what degree of acquaintanceship is every man connected with every man, supposing there to be 1000 men.

11. If one bottle is enough for eight reading and a half, how many bottles will be requisite for one man who does not read?

12. Of two Cambridge controversialists, one asserts that the apple which Newton saw fall was a codlin, the other that it was a golden pippin. State the dispute of these learned philosophers, and shew its effect upon Newton's theory.

13. According to the theory of light, what light is best for escaping the eye of the Proctor?

14. If three men out of seven are plucked when the examiner is in a good humour, how many out of nine will be plucked when he is in a bad humour?

15. Let A be a hunter, B a freshman on the hunter's back, C a fence, and D a muddy ditch, on the other side of the fence. The hunter A suddenly draws up at the fence C. What connection will follow between the freshman B and the ditch D?

THE END.

COOKE, PRINTER, HIGH STREET.

2 132

582

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS-URBANA

3 0112 064333211

